I used to collect his records (long before I knew who he was) and even saw him in "Saturday Night Fever" when I was about 14. I've seen him on television over and over. He's right up there with Steve McQueen as one of the best actors of the 1960s (along with Rod Steiger). He's near the top of my list of actors to see again. In fact, Travolta could have been a huge star in the 1990s if it hadn't been for the HGH scandal. Basically, he has an issue with high cholesterol and I thought that he looked remarkably younger than he did in the '80s. When I was in my 20s, I was willing to forgive him for the massive amounts of plastic surgery and ill-advised experiments on his body. He also was a very difficult man, and I admired him for his refusal to give up his privacy or lifestyle despite constant nosiness from the
