.fmt.jpeg) Photoshop can create images that don't really exist — but is that always a good thing? Read on to find out. Photoshop has two types of layers: _smart_ and _non_ smart. Smart layers are those that maintain their settings even if the surrounding layers are changed. For example, if you use a smart layer to create a solid white background for your image, the image will maintain that white background if you make changes to the other layers in the image. Non-smart layers are typically used to hold the actual raster file data, so they don't keep their properties when layers are changed. In Figure 6-4, you can see that a smart layer (the image's background) is placed on top of the layers that have been manipulated (the layers to the right). This enables the background to be invisible but still editable if another layer is changed. Figure 6-4: Smart layers have their settings preserved if the surrounding layers are changed. Photoshop also uses a retouching tool that enables you to edit the photo in multiple layers so that even hard-to-reach areas of the image can be brought to life. This tool is called the _lasso_ (see Figure 6-5). You can use it to edit areas of the image based on a line that defines its shape. You can then choose to adjust the color, apply a filter, or change the opacity of the selected area. Figure 6-5: The lasso tool allows you to trace the outline of any selected area in order to manipulate it. The next two chapters introduce you to Adobe Photoshop Elements, an easy-to-use image-editing program with many image-editing functions. Figure 6-6: A layer mask used to add or subtract one image from another. Vijayawada: The Congress, together with other Opposition parties, on Thursday hit out at the Andhra Pradesh government for the latter's action of creating and naming of posts only on the basis of party loyalty. In a strongly-worded statement, the Congress alleged that the chief minister has been 'carpet-bombing' the state with government posts ignoring the interests of the public. The Congress leaders said that a large number of ministers, engineers and other bureaucrats were new appointees, many of them were chosen on the basis of party loyalty. The issue was highlighted by AICC general secretary Janardan Dwivedi, who alleged that the chief minister has hired new Ministers at a higher rate of salaries than those from the previous regime without posting them. He also alleged that the chief minister's new demands for appointment of ministers every day without assigning them any project was causing disaffection among those ministers, who feel insulted. He said that the chief minister wants to fill a huge number of posts without providing adequate funds. Krishna Raju, former Dindigul MP, alleged that the new government had released very few of the expenses allocated for the Power Grid Corporation and Andhra Pradesh Cricket Association. He said that the chief minister took personal initiative to release all the power projects within the state only to fill up his cabinet as there was no opposition party that could stymie his move. Accusing the government of increasing the number of the minister of expenses, Krishna Raju said that this was affecting the welfare of the people. He said that the Chief Minister had appointed 33 ministers in just 15 days of assuming office and the salary of all of them is only Rs 10,000 per month. Krishna Raju said that despite promises of providing jobs to students, there is no tangible result. He alleged that the chief minister has not raised the issue of power project pending with the state and central governments during their deliberations in the Constituent Assembly. He said that the chief minister has only been interested in giving employment to his own partymen. Vani Kola, a Congress Rajya Sabha MP, in a sharply-worded statement accused the government of spoiling the existing institutions and weakening the Public Institutions. March 25, 2009 S.C. I have a working java application in which data is fetched from database and displayed in a jtextpane. I want to integrate this java application with windows forms like a master-slave kind of structure. Can anyone help? A: With Windows Forms, you should look at a WPF application. I've used Java on Windows for a while and find it works fine, at the moment, but it's not built for a Desktop "app" kind of environment. On the other hand, you could create a Java Swing application which looks great on a Desktop display and is flexible enough for a Windows Forms application too. One example of this is 1Password. 1Password for Windows is built in Java and looks fantastic. I think your best bet is to look at 1Password (or an equivalent application) to see what sort of application you can create.
